Business Case Studies

Enterprises oriented towards the conversion of bio-based materials to utilizable products and services are at the heart of bioeconomy, and provide a fresh alternative to the fossil-based economic approach.

This event will show-case start-ups and early-stage companies which, 1) up-grade bio-waste to usable products, 2) provide new environmentally sustainable business solutions for water contamination from farm run-off, and 3) implement microbiology-driven processes, such as the production of vitamin B12 from waste whey derived in the dairy industry.

These three case studies will offer a back-drop for an interactive discussion on how to bring the bioeconomy to reality for your businesses, and offer a sustainable development-oriented approach benefiting society.
